See 1938 Hybrid Seed Corn Growing In Frankfort Field

Farmers of Will County and vicinity have the unusual opportunity of watching and inspecting their 1938 Hybrid seed corn grow, which will better enable them to judge its adaptation to their location and soil conditions, by visiting Thomson's Top Yield Pfister Hybrid seed corn fields in Frankfort Township, Will County.

Three of these fields are located on the north side of Lincoln Highway (U. S. 30) about one half mile west of the intersection of U. S. 30 and U. S. 45.

There is no other corn bordering on the Lincoln in this mile hence easily recognized.

There are over 80 acres of Hybrid seed growing in this block on the north side of the Lincoln and developing the Hybrid corn best adapted to Will County soil and climatic conditions. Get your order in early for your 1938 seed requirements from adapted hybrid corn grown in your locality under your personal observation and inspection as distinguished from seed corn grown far distant under conditions and care unknown to you and where you only have the printing on the tag or label to judge by.

As a rule home folks usually have the choice of grades and first call on the edge drop sizes of seed corn, leaving the butts and tips for the distant fellow at edge drop prices.

Why not get in with the home folks on adopted top yield seed and where you have the opportunity of field observation and scrutiny. Don't, however, miss seeing these Thomson fields of Top Yield Pfister Hybrid Seed corn with their depth of color and particularly watch the detassling operations during the coming three weeks period.

Mokena Teacher Marries Lockport Attorney at Joliet

Miss Mildred Doig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert A. Doig of Joliet, who has been teaching the primary grade in the Mokena school, was united in marriage last Saturday afternoon at four o'clock in the Richard's street M. E. church in Joliet, to Glenn E. Miller, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Miller of Lockport.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a beautiful white lace gown in redingote style over white tulle. It was fashioned with a high stand-up collar and at the throat was a tiny spray of lilies of the valley. She wore a bluish veil and a four-yard long tulle veil which was caught in a braided halo headpiece. Her sandals were white and she carried a wedding handkerchief that her mother carried 31 years ago, and her only ornament was a pair of diamond ear-rings, a gift from the bridegroom.

Mrs. John Shaffer, of Lockport, matron of honor, wore a gown of pink lace trimmed in tulle, designed with a high collar and puff sleeves. Her pink tulle veil was held in place with a halo of pink flowers. Mrs. Shaffer's accessories were white and she carried a bouquet of blue delphinium tied with pink.

Bridesmaids were Miss June Hutchinson and Mrs. Edward Schiebe. They were dressed similar to the matron of honor except that they wore blue instead of pink. They carried bouquets of pink larkspur tied with blue and their accessories were white.

The candles at the altar were lit immediately preceding the wedding procession by the two candlelighters. Miss Gladie Aspel, who wore green embroidered silk organdie lace, and Mrs. Earl Ferguson, who wore peach-colored mouseline de soie. Both wore large peach-colored horse hair hats and white accessories.

Immediately after the ceremony there was a reception for all in the foyer of the church. Following, there was a reception for close relatives and friends in the home of the bride's parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller left on a northern honeymoon trip and after August 1st will be at home in their newly furnished apartment, 940 Hamilton street, Lockport. For her going away frock, Mrs. Miller chose a white palm beach suit with matching accessories. She wore a pink blouse and a floral corsage.

The groom is an attorney and practices law in Chicago and Lockport. He was graduated from the Lockport High school and took both his under-graduate and advance law training at the University of Illinois. He is a member of the Sigma Delta Kappa fraternity.

Included in the out-of-town guest list were the following local residents: Mr. and Mrs. Albert Cappel, Mokena; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Papke and Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Doig, New Lenox; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Cleveland, Tinley Park; Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Cleveland, Orland Park; Mr. and Mrs. Wayne McCleery of Leland, Illinois. Mr. McCleery was formerly principal of the Mokena public school.

CHILDREN HALT DAD'S FLAMING YOUTH CAREER

The eight children of Adam Horn, 69 years old, a retired farmer of Orland Park, appeared last Wednesday in the Cook County probate court asking that their father be adjudged incompetent and a conservator appointed to administer his estate. The children, headed by Mrs. Ida Lillis, 842 West 70th street, Chicago, charged through their attorney, Victor Frohlich, that Horn, a widower, had assumed the manners of a wild youth and was courting a girl nineteen years old.

As evidence of his behavior, Frohlich declared that Horn in recent months, since meeting the young woman, has shaved off his mustache, had his fingernails polished, and purchased four automobiles, which he drives at high speeds.

Frohlich told the court that Horn has spent five thousand dollars on the young woman, and unless restrained, will dissipate all his estate, established at between seventy-five and one hundred thousand dollars. In court, Horn, who was represented by Attorney Irving W. Eiserman, said he had quit going with the young woman.

Judge John F. O'Connell continued the hearing until the fall term of court, but directed that Horn, who resides with a son in Orland Park, receive only forty dollars a month for his expenses. Horn, according to Frohlich, formerly owned considerable farm land, which he sold, and invested the proceeds. He has a half interest in the Silver Lake Golf Course.

Tinley to Battle Calumet For Second Place

After bowling over Oak Forest last Sunday by the score of 5 to 11 to conclude play in the first round of the Southwest League's championship fight, the powerful Tinley Park team is grooming for one of its stiffest encounters when they meet the strong Calumet Parkers from Blue Island with their great mound ace Tony Sinise.

In the season's opener the Tinleyites found little trouble solving the offerings of the former Blue Island High ace but since that time Sinise has pitched great ball recently losing a twelve inning encounter with Worth, present league leaders. The game will be played at Schmidt's field. Time 2:30 p. m.

Last Sunday Tinley coasted to victory behind Homerding's three hit performance. At no time was the Tinley lead endangered. Due to the intense heat the Tinley offense eased up in the late innings, pushing across enough runs for a winning margin. Homerding although not working hard, fanned fifteen of the Foresters. Scheulins great defensive

Mokena Wins Over St. Cyril

Mokena wins over St. Cyril 5 to 3. Game held up in the 4th inning. The Mokena boys really played a snappy game from beginning to end, to beat the league leaders.

The game was marred by a difference of opinion between the umpires and all 18 players and less than a 100 spectators; over the merits of a ball hit by Spencer Hauser in the 4th inning.

Spencer Hauser hit a slow rolling ball down the first base line, the first baseman of St. Cyril rushed down the base line to field the ball and then looked it over like a clucking hen full of love or regard for her chicks, all the time hoping it would roll foul. Well it didn't and stopped dead in fair territory, thereby starting a fight promised to be another civil war. One umpire called it a fair ball. The first baseman for St. Cyril gave it a kick in his disappointment and before he woke up two runs had scored, one by Bob Frisch and one by Dick Walsh. Then the fun began.

The other umpire (St. Cyril's) called the ball foul. Some fun. After 20 or 30 minutes and no agreement the game was resumed by our boys' accepting a foul ruling so as to continue the game, much to the disgust of the cash customers.

The real thrill for all of us was to beat the team 5 to 3 after conceding them two runs.

Mokena boys played St. Cyril 3 weeks ago and ended with a tie score the game being called on account of darkness.

Our boys really played bang up base ball, lead by the brilliant pitching of George Lauffer.

Next Sunday Mokena plays Ingalls Park and the following Sunday we again play St. Cyril. Both games will

MOTHER OF TINLEY PARK POSTMASTER DIES

Tinley has lost one of its most gracious and beloved residents in the passing away of Mrs. Emelia Rauhoff.

Born in Kalmar County, Sweden, on June 9th, 1866, one of twin daughters of August and Anna Nelson, she received her early religious training in the Lutheran church and was confirmed in that faith.

In 1885 at the age of 18 years, she came to America, Chicago, Illinois. In early 1893 she met John M. Rauhoff and was united with him in marriage on December 23rd of that year. Four children were born to this devoted couple, two of whom, a boy and a girl, died in infancy.

In September, 1902, the family moved from Chicago to Tinley Park where they entered wholeheartedly in village life and joined the Methodist church in which they took an active interest. Mrs. Rauhoff having taught in Sunday School for several years. A firm believer in the adage "Happiness lies in doing," Mrs. Rauhoff devotedly gave her effort for her family, friends and church.

On October 19, 1927, Mr. Rauhoff passed away, after which until her death, Mrs. Rauhoff did not enjoy very good health. She passed away peacefully on Friday, July 9th at the age of 71 years and one month and is survived by two sons, Millard A. Rauhoff of Blue Island and Paul Rauhoff of Tinley Park and two grandchildren Romyne and Carol. She is also survived by two sisters residing in Stockholm, Sweden, namely Hilda Carlson and Anna Nelson, the latter being her twin sister.

Frankfort Mayor Takes Party On Prison Inspection

Mayor George Sangmeister of Frankfort took the following party of six on a tour thru the old Joliet penitentiary and Stateville Monday: Walter Pfaff, Henry Breidert, Bertton Breidert, Walter Harnack, Alfred Zechnin all of Frankfort and Wm. Semmler of Mokena.

The party met Warden Sehring at the old penitentiary and Warden Joseph Ragen at Stateville. Special guards were provided for the party and they were shown many interesting sights in both institutions. At the old pen there are 1700 inmates and at Stateville 3350. The manufacturing departments, the bakery, kitchen, cell houses, etc., were the chief points of interest.

Goods made in the prison are not sold in competition with industry. A farm of 2200 acres furnishes practically all the food supply for the two institutions.

A striking fact was the observance that very excellent food is being served the convicts, in fact better than many poor families get. Another fact was the spotlessly clean cells and beds, with a canary bird in a cage and a radio in many of the cells.

SEEKING DONATIONS FOR GIFT

Anyone wishing to donate any thing toward gift for Mrs. Mildred Doig Miller, former teacher of Mokena school, who was recently married, please get in touch with Mrs. Henry Shevlin or Mrs. Stokes Nebeker, before next Tuesday.

SYNOPSIS

Brooke Reyburn visits the office of Jed Stewart, a lawyer, to discuss the terms of an estate she has inherited from Mrs. Mary Amanda Dane. Unwittingly she overhears Jed talking to Mark Trent, nephew of Mrs. Dane who has been disinherited. Mrs. Dane had lived at Lookout House, a huge structure by the sea, built by her father and divided into two, for her and her father. Brooke had been a fashion expert and Mrs. Dane, a "shut-in," hearing her on the radio, had invited her to call and developed a deep affection for her. Mark discloses that Mrs. Dane had threatened to disinherit him if he married Lola, from whom he is now divorced. He says he does not trust Henri and Lucette, two weeks before Mrs. Dane died. Brooke had arrived just as she was leaving. Jed suggests that Mark open his part of Lookout House, get friendly with Brooke and try to find out about the will. Jed agrees to stay with him. Mark accepts Brooke's invitation for a family Thanksgiving dinner at Lookout. Mrs. Reyburn announces on Thanksgiving eve that she has been invited to England. Sam and Lucette decide to move in with Brooke and Sam plans to produce a new play locally. After the Thanksgiving dinner Brooke tells Mark that little of Mrs. Dane's silver collection is left. Jerry Field and his sister Daphne drop in and announce they will be neighbors for the winter.

"It must have been Mrs. Dane's friend Mrs. Gregory; they call her the Empress here. So she has called. That means, if she likes us, that we shall be admitted into the inner social circle. Jerry, I was so dazed by your appearance that I forgot to ask what you meant by that word 'neighbor'."

"Sure, we're neighbors. Daphne and I have taken a house here for the season."

"Season! What season?"

"This winter, of course. Didn't you say that many of the houses were to be kept open?"

"Yes. But why—" Surprise crisped Brooke's voice.

"I've been wanting for years to paint snow. Found I could hire a house with a studio here. You don't mind, I hope?"

"Don't be foolish, Jerry. Of course I don't, only—"

"No matter what Brooke thinks, I'm all for it, Mr. Field," Lucette encouraged. "It will be grand to have someone kind of young in the neighborhood—and—Oh, Sam, two more recruits for the cast of your play! Line of applicants for parts will please form on the left."

"Play! What play? I adore dramatics." Daphne Field's voice and eyes were eager.

"We've been talking about producing Sam's comedy, 'Islands Arise,' for charity. Of course it's a terrific job. We always paint our own scenery—"

"Hold! Jerry the boy artist will paint the scenery!"—Field's enthusiasm cooled—"afraid my box of a studio wouldn't be big enough though."

"There is a large empty room on the second floor next to Lucette's. Couldn't decide just how to furnish it, so I've waited. We can use that. Won't it be grand, Sam?" Brooke explained and demanded in the same breath.

"Yeah, but what does that prove? How do I know whether the Field team can act, or whether they'll gum up the show?"

"Don't be a grouch, Master Reyburn," Lucette jibed. "You'd better page the family Lost and Found Department for your manners. I adore neighbors. I'm pleased purple that we are to have two such snappy ones."

Mark Trent straightened and flung the cigarette he had but a moment before lighted into the fire. He kept his eyes on Lucette as he announced:

"Newsflash! Not two new neighbors, but four, lady. I'm opening my house next week. Jed Stewart and I will keep bachelor hall there. My announcement doubtless lacks the romantic overtones of Field's, but we'll do our best to make you Reyburns neighbor-conscious."

In the firelit library of his house, Mark Trent was perched on the corner of the large flat desk. As he filled his pipe he compared the old-fashioned air of dignified restfulness of the room with its deep chairs in the smoking-room manner and its two-story book-lined walls, divided half way up by a gallery, with the charm of its twin on the other side of the brocade hanging which screened the door connecting the two houses.

Jed Stewart, lounging in a crimson leather chair, hands in his trousers pockets, legs outstretched, was staring at the blazing logs, watching the blue and yellow, copper and green tongues of flame lick at the chimney. The faint thunder of waves dashing against ledges, the ceaseless crying of sea gulls stole through the heavy hangings drawn across the long windows. Impatiently he sat up.

"We've been here a week, Mark, and we are not the fraction of a degree nearer finding that last will and testament of Mary Amanda Dane's—if there is such a thing."

"And the silver; don't forget the silver, Jed. I can account for the will being lost—if there was one—but what has become of the silver? I've had it so much on my mind that I consulted Bill Harrison."

"Who's he?"

"The inspector in charge of police headquarters across the causeway. He's been on the force here since I was a small boy."

"What did he say about the silver?"

"He didn't say, he doesn't talk much. He asked a few questions about the Jacques and said he would drop in here this afternoon to take a look around. Mrs. Gregory is coming later—hope they don't meet—I asked her to have tea with me. Met her yesterday on the street, and she let it be known that her feelings were hurt that I had not invited her before. I—I asked her to bring Miss Reyburn."

Mark Trent slid from the desk and absently twirled a globe which showed the countries of the world as they had been before the Treaty of Versailles had remade the map of Europe.

"Do you think Brooke Reyburn suspects that we are here as amateur detectives, Jed?"

"Amateurs! We may be, but you've called in a professional on the job, haven't you? You can't tell what that girl thinks, but why should she suspect our reason for being here more than Field's, and one couldn't suspect that lad of ulterior motives. He always looks to me as if he were on the verge of kissing a lady's hand. Why didn't you accept the lead in Sam's comedy? It was offered to you, wasn't it?"

"It was, but long ago I outgrew dramatics. What do you think of 'Islands Arise'—that's the name of the play, isn't it?"

"That it will get a fair hearing, at least. The theater-going world isn't so cocky and hard-boiled as it was some years ago and it may appreciate Sam's ideas and ideals. You'd be a knock-out in the lead, fella."

"I wouldn't take part in the play if I were aching to act. I see the Reyburns as seldom as possible. Thanksgiving day when Brooke started to thank me for pulling her from under that car, I burned with shame when I remembered why I had accepted her invitation. I don't care for this spy stuff, even if I do believe that the girl by some hocus pocus hypnotized Aunt Mary Amanda."

"You show it. Getting to be the strong, silent type, aren't you, Mark? If you feel that way about her, why did you ask Mrs. Gregory to bring Brooke here this afternoon? You never have been fair to that girl. You started with the idea that she's crooked, and you're sticking to it like honey to a glass dish."

Trent blew a shrill whistle through his fingers. Stewart laughed.

"I get you, the stop signal. I'll toss her a posy, then I'll quit. I'm supposed to be stage manager of Sam's play, but I'd sure make a mess of it without Brooke as my property woman. She's executive and then some. She never forgets."

"When does the play come off?"

"First Thursday in January. Sam thought of New Year's eve but gave that up for fear he couldn't lure a producer away from New York festivities."

"That isn't far off. We'll have a grand celebration here for the cast and friends who come from town. We'll invite the neighbors to supper and dance after the show. Have you a speaking part?"

Mark Trent stopped speaking to stare at the ceiling. Had a door banged overhead, or had he imagined the sound? The servants, Taku and Kowa, were in the kitchen at this time of day; they wouldn't be on the third floor anyway, he had not had that opened up, plenty of room below for Jed and himself.

A man entered the room with a purposeful stride. He was ample of jowl, slightly opulent at waistline; he had the flinty eyes of an eagle who can stare straight at the sun. A sense of force was his outstanding characteristic.

"Here I am, Mark. That Jap outside wanted to bow me in, but I shooed him off." Inspector Bill Harrison's voice was surprisingly soft with a persuasive inflection.

"Glad you've come, Inspector. This is my friend Jed Stewart."

Inspector Harrison nodded. "How are you, Mr. Stewart. Does he know about the silver, Mark?" He lowered himself into a deep chair and accepted a cigar.

"Yes, he's staying here to help me—us solve the mystery."

"What else have you lost?"

"Why do you think we've lost anything else?"

"Would you two city guys come to this burg to stay just to find a lot of silverware?"

"It's more than mere silverware; the pieces are antiques of great value."

Inspector Harrison pulled himself from the enticing crimson depths to his feet.

"All right, Mark, have it your own way, but I ain't mixin' up in a case where folks are holding out on me."

I work best when the interested party works with me. Get that?"

Mark's laugh was quick and disarming.

"Hold everything, Bill Harrison; you can't walk out on us like that. Sit down again. Jed, tell him what Mrs. Gregory told us about the will she witnessed. You understand, Inspector, that there may be nothing to it—so it's off the record."

"Say, Mark, do you suppose I climbed up on the force by talking my head off? I play the rules. Spill it, Mr. Stewart."

Stewart repeated Mrs. Gregory's astonishing announcement that she had witnessed a will of Mary Amanda Dane's of a date later than the will allowed; told of the decision of Mark and himself to turn detectives and of their absolute unsuccessful to date.

Inspector Bill Harrison blew a perfect smoke ring.

"Did Mrs. Gregory say there was anyone else present but Mrs. Dane and the other witnesses when she signed?"

"No."

Mark Trent's answer was nothing short of explosive. The inspector's soft grudging laugh, in such marked contrast to his bird-of-prey eyes, brought guilty color to his face. It wasn't keeping back information not to tell that Brooke Reyburn had driven in that afternoon just as Mrs. Gregory had driven out from Lookout House, was it?

Inspector Bill Harrison rose. With a cigar tucked in one corner of his mouth, he nodded.

"I'll be going. Guess I've got all the dope. Don't give that Henri Jacques and his wife the idea that you've missed the silver. Let it drop out of their minds. When you have any news, come to headquarters, don't phone. That reminds me. Know anything about the people who've started the filling station here on the point?"

"No. But I understand that Henri Jacques is recommending them."

"Oh, he is? That Henri's just naturally helpful, ain't he? Well, I must get back." He added in his soft persuasive voice:

"Whenever you're ready to come across with the name of the other party who was in the neighborhood of Lookout House the day that last will of Mrs. Dane's was signed, Mark, I'm just across the causeway. I'll be seeing you."

"Don't go yet, Bill!"

He mustn't leave thinking that he and Jed were holding out on him, Mark realized.

Jed Stewart grabbed Mark's shoulder.

"Hold on, Mark. See who's here!"

Mark Trent turned. Surprise brought him to his feet, wiped the smile from his lips. That couldn't be Lola on the threshold! It was Hunt, her name was now, Lola Hunt, he must remember.

"Say, Mark, I'll be making my get-away."

He nodded response to Bill Harrison's mumble. Knew when he opened the door which led to the print room and vanished. Evidently the inspector didn't care to meet Lola. Who did? With the question Mark thrust his hands hard into his coat pockets and took a step forward.

"Well?"

The sound was more a growl than a word, he realized, as he looked steadily at the woman who had been his wife. Had been. At last he had come to think of her in the past tense. It had taken three years to accomplish that. The shame, the humiliation, the unbearable heartache he had suffered in the years they had lived together swept over him in a sickening tide. What did she want now? She was the type of woman who constantly and everlastingly wanted something. Wasn't he giving her enough? There had been no justice in his giving her anything, but when she had written him that her current husband was out of a job and that she was hungry, what could he do but make her an allowance till the man found work? Her clothing had a cheap smartness; the dark brilliance of her eyes was intensified by artificial shadows; her skin was thick and flushed; her short black hair needed trimming; her mouth drooped at the corners. She pouted lips which resembled nothing so much as a bloody smear.

"Don't stare at me as if I were a ghost from out a purple past, Mark. I told you Jap that I was an old friend, that I wanted to surprise you. I hate to keep the gentlemen standing. Won't you ask me to sit down?"

Without waiting for an answer, she sank into the large chair before the fire.

"Still pals you two, aren't you? Funny how much longer friendship lasts between men than love between a man and woman. Mark, I came here to talk to you. Jed, you may go."

Mark Trent's hand closed on Stewart's arm with a grip which turned his nails white.

"Jed will stay and hear what you have to say. Surely we can have no secrets from the man who saw us through the divorce court."

She shrugged. "All right with me. I've nothing to lose. Thought you might object to having what I say get on the air."

"Methinks the lady is implying that I'm a gossip."

Lesson for July 18

LESSON TEXT—Exodus 3:13-16; 4:10-16;

5:1.

GOLDEN TEXT—The Lord will give strength unto his people.—Psalm 29:11.

PRIMARY TOPIC—When Moses Was Afraid.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Moses Made Ambassador.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—God Stands by His Workers.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Strong in the Strength of God.

Never in a hurry! Who? God. He needed a human leader to bring his chosen people up out of the bondage of Egypt and he spent 80 years getting him ready—40 years learning all the wisdom of Egypt, and 40 years learning the lessons of God, patience and humility, on the back side of the desert.

Infinite and omnipotent is God, and he may move with faster-than-lightning speed. But usually we find him working out his blessed purposes, normally, quietly, but always "on time."

Our lesson brings before us the meeting with God which preceded the appearance of Moses as the head of the nation of Israel in its mighty conflict with Pharaoh. We find him first proceeding with commendable care but then going on in unfortunate humility which amounted almost to unbelief and which resulted in the substitution of his brother Aaron as his spokesman, but eventually we do see him going about his difficult task with resolution and courage.

I. Justifiable Caution (Exod. 3:13-16).

Neither God nor man dare entrust a high and difficult commission to a foolish man who brusquely "rushes in where angels fear to tread." The fact that one feels fully and unhesitatingly qualified to take over such a responsibility is almost a certain indication that he is not the man to assume it.

The ambassador must have credentials. God's representative has them. When "they shall say"—what an important and difficult situation that creates. The one who speaks for God must expect not only the scornful bitterness of God's enemies, but also the unbelieving questions of those he seeks to serve.

"What shall I say?" asks Moses, and God answers that he may say that "I AM" had sent him. This name of God reveals him as the eternal, independent, self-sufficient, self-existent, immutable, personal being. Consider, Christian brethren, whose we are and whom we serve. Here indeed is "inspiration in excess of duty," real equipment for Christian life and service.

But Moses seems to be unable to see beyond his own human infirmity even in the light of such a glorious revelation, supplemented as it was by miraculous powers, and we find him showing an

II. Unjustified Humility (Exod. 4:10-12).

When God calls a man he knows his limitations—why then should one plead them as an excuse for not serving? The excuse of Moses that he was not a fluent speaker has been the stand-by of unwilling workers all through the ages. When asked to lead a prayer meeting, teach a Sunday School class, conduct a young people's meeting, thousands have lamely thus excused themselves and missed a blessing.

The perfect answer of God in v.11 merits attention. God made your mouth and mine. He gives us the power of speech. He asks not the eloquence of polished rhetorical periods, or the flights of man's imagination. He wants but the incomparable eloquence of his own words on our lips. Dr. Richard Ellsworth Day in "Bush Aglow" rightly points out that this was the secret of the power of D. L. Moody.

III. Unnecessary Substitution (Exod. 4:13-16).

Loving and patient is our God, but there is a boundary line to that patience. Moses went too far in his humility and reflected on the ability of God, who promptly substituted Aaron as the spokesman.

Gracious was He in thus providing a helper for Moses. But one wonders what Moses missed of blessing and power because of his slowness of heart.

IV. "And Afterward" (Exod. 5:1). Commissioned, bearing credentials from the infinite and eternal "I AM," and with a strong and eloquent brother by his side, Moses stands before Pharaoh to say in God's name, "Let my people go."

Preparation and the holy privilege of fellowship with God are to make us ready for service. While it is folly to go unprepared, it is double folly to prepare and then fail to go when God commands.

Morning and Evening Prayer

It is well to let prayer be the first employment in the morning and the last in the evening.—M. Luther.

As He Sees Us

As we come to know ourselves through and through, we come to see ourselves more as God sees us.

The Counters of Wise Men

Words are the counters of wise men, and the money of fools.—Hobbes.

Fashions at Vacationland

HURRAY for dear old Johnnie Two-Weeks! He's recently given the nod to these three sweet young laborers and now they're off reaping the rewards. Yes, they're vacationing—and how! But, of course, Sew-Your-Own had them dressed right up to the hilt. There was a luscious array of sports togs, including a trig sun 'n' fun suit, all occasion dresses, and charmingly young informal dinner frocks, and—well, just about everything a girl could wear.

Chic in Chiffon.

Miss M., picturesque blonde, above left, knows what glamour is and how to have it. That's why she chose this softly feminine frock with its swirling skirt and delicately slim waist. You should see her at an evening in the outdoor terrace. She's a picture in black gossamer chiffon trimmed with white satin. And to think, she made it all herself!

Cunning in Cotton.

Miss B., above, center, and center of attraction at the Surf club, has everything under perfect control as she strolls along the boardwalk. With not a care in her pretty head, and lots of streamlining in her natty little sports dress, she walks with confidence and pride. She has a clever way of achieving variety by switching scarfs and belts.

Cool for Sports.

Miss Y., the sports enthusiast at the right, says that her three piece ensemble is so very, very and practical she wears it almost to the exclusion of her other frocks. Her idea is to soak up as much sunshine as possible, and that's pretty easy to do when she wears the halter and shorts sans dress. Take a tip from Miss Y. Make your version of this ensemble in duplicate for all summer wear. Have one in seersucker, the other in acetate.

The Patterns.

Pattern 1241 is for sizes 14 to 20 (32 to 44 bust). Size 16 requires 4 3/4 yards of 39 inch material plus 1 1/2 yards of ribbon, and 3 yards of trimming.

Pattern 1316 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 4 yards of 39 inch material.

Pattern 1335 is designed for sizes 12 to 20 (30 to 38 bust). Size 14 requires 4 3/4 yards of 39 inch material for the dress and shorts, and 1 yard for the top. The dress alone requires 3 3/4 yards.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Dept., Room 1020, 211 W. Wacker Dr., Chicago, Ill. Price of patterns, 15 cents (in coins) each.

Tinley Legion Post Auxiliary

Viola L. Carr, Chairman,
Unit Publicity

American Legion Auxiliary of Tinley Park held their last meeting Friday evening, July 9.

Trudie Swisher, Junior Activities chairman, stated the juniors of Auxiliary were officially organized on July 2nd at a picnic held in the Forest Preserve on Harlem avenue. The following officers were elected: Blanch Mary Carr, Chairman at Large; Martha Grace Richards, Secretary; Joy Berg, Sergeant at Arms.

All other members to serve on a Rehabilitation Committee. They studied the first three divisions of the Preamble and Pledge Allegiance to the Flag. The rest of the afternoon was spent in fun such as races and games for which prizes were given. The juniors also had an amateur program of tap dancing, singing, imitating, etc., well worth any audience listening in. All brought their own lunches.

On Rehabilitation, Mrs. Geo. Rowden reported silk horse contest closed and Mrs. Ceithaml leading with 541 pair to her credit. Wannamacher came second with 424 pair. Altogether about 1300 pair were received. The prize will be awarded at the next meeting. These socks and many pounds of carpet rags will be delivered to Hines hospital. Mrs. Rowden read a letter of thanks received from Peoria for candy sent the boys there. A very faithful and devoted worker on rehabilitation has been Mrs. Rowden for the Auxiliary and deserves great credit.

Buddy Berg's report on "Boys' State" camp was read by Mrs. Swisher since Buddy could not attend in person.

"Boys' States," conducted in 11 states this year by the American Legion, has been given active support by American Legion Auxiliary Units. Tinley Park sent Buddy and his duty at the camp was State Police. "Boys' State" is part of the Legion Americanism program and is receiving high approval as practical schools of citizenship.

Complete city, county, and state governments are set up by the boys attending the State encampment. A boy governor is elected in each state, along with other state, county, and local officials. Legislatures are elected and enact legislation for the camp. Courts with boy judges are in regular session. Actual experience in citizenship is given to the boys during their week at the camp.

Many Auxiliary members visiting the camps and giving programs. The activity is considered one of the most effective Americanism projects the Legion has ever sponsored and is spreading to more states every year.

Mrs. Amanda Brandau was missed at our meeting and we hope for a speedy recovery to health for her.

Don't fail to attend our next meeting July 23rd, as a great treat is in store for all and it is social night.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES
"Sacrament" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, July 11.
The Golden Text was, "What are these which are arrayed in white robes? and whence came they? . . . These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb" (Rev. 7:13, 14).
Among the citations which comprised the Lesson-Sermon was the following from the Bible: "Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled. Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God" (Matthew 5:3, 6, 8).

The Lesson-Sermon also included the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "The baptism of Spirit, washing the body of all the impurities of flesh, signifies that the pure in heart see God and are approaching spiritual Life and its demonstration" (p. 241).

This well has been a source of water supply for residents in the vicinity of the depot for over forty years and as far as known no case of disease was ever attributed to the water from this well.

Roof Colors in China

In China the use to which a building is put is not indicated by its design but by the color of the tiles used for the roof. Green indicates an official place, yellow a commercial place and brown a place where people live.

The Bureaucrats and Their Power

By RAYMOND PITCAIRN

National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Official reports from Washington record a new peak in the number of peace-time Federal job-holders.

During the month of May, the records show, almost 5,000 new names were written on the public payroll. This brought the total to 840,159—a throng exceeded only during the emergency of a World War.

And, of course, the total of paychecks rose proportionately.

All this is obviously tough on the public—which must pay the bills—but it's a great help to many of the appointed Bureaucrats.

Why?

Because it was the Bureaucrats—the appointed heads of the countless new boards and bureaus and commissions now overwhelming Washington, who demanded this increased spending of the people's money—and who put their demands across.

Many leading Senators and Representatives have, in recent weeks, emphatically opposed continued extravagance. The White House has promised economies. But the Bureaucrats realize that without lavish spending their growth must cease. And Bureaucracy seems determined to expand.

Growing armies of job-holders are, of course, only one element of the Bureaucrats' steady drain on the public purse. New and costly and spreading activities into all possible fields create still other burdens for taxpayers to shoulder. And these burdens will continue to multiply until Congress does the job it was elected to do.

That job is to legislate for the American people who elected them; not for appointed Bureaucrats who seek to enhance their power through a succession of big checks drawn against the people's earnings.

Many Sleep on Feathers

Several from this vicinity attended the funeral services for Mrs. Mary Hostert in Mokena, Wednesday morning.

Mrs. Hostert was born and raised in Homer and was held in high esteem by all who knew her. Mrs. Hostert was born Feb. 4, 1860, and resided here until 1929, when she and her husband, retired from the farm and moved to Mokena. In 1931 Mr. Hostert passed away, since then Mrs. Hostert has made her home with her son, Barney and family.

She is survived by four sons, William, of Homer; John of Canada Jacob of Frankfort and Barney of Mokena, and twelve grandchildren.

Funeral services were held from St. Mary's catholic church, with burial in St. Michael's cemetery in Homer. Wm. Ross, Fred Kopelman, George Ott and Lloyd Reiter acted as pallbearers.

At the church services in the Homer Congregational church, Sunday morning, the Misses June Milton, Isabel Anderson, Betty Hartman and Lois Ott gave brief talks on the camp life at Towerhill. Mrs. Marie Ott furnished the special music for the morning.

PETER RABBIT ASKS AFTER OLD FRIENDS

NO SOONER had Winsome Bluebird finished telling how Ol' Mistah Buzzard warms his toes on the chimneys of the houses in the far-away South than Peter Rabbit was full of questions about other friends who had been spending the long winter in the land of sunshine.

"Where is Little Friend the Song Sparrow?" he asked eagerly.

"Little Friend of All is not very far away," he replied. "In fact, I think he will be here in a few days, Peter. You see, Little Friend loves the Green Meadows and the Smiling Pool so much that he cannot bear to go any farther away than he has to. I guess he feels just as I do. And so he doesn't go way, way down South as some do, but just far enough to be comfortable and to be sure that he will be able to get enough to eat. I heard him singing only a few days ago, and he said to tell his friends up here that he is on his way."

"My, but I'll be glad to hear him again," said Peter with a sigh. "Somehow I always feel better as ever, and he really is very well and in splendid spirits, considering the hard time he has had ever since he left here."

"What do you mean? Doesn't Cheerful find enough to eat down South?" demanded Peter, pricking up his long ears.

"Plenty, plenty!" replied Winsome Bluebird. "It's the way people treat him down there. Men and boys are altogether too fond of Cheerful."

Peter looked up quickly to see if Winsome was joking, but he didn't seem to be. Indeed, he seemed to have a kind of sorrowful look, as if thinking of the hard time Cheerful Robin had had made him feel bad. "If they are so fond of him I should think that Cheerful would have the best kind of a time," said Peter.

"They are fond of him in the wrong way," replied Winsome sadly. "They are fond of him to eat, and Cheerful has to be watching out all the time for dreadful guns. I wish he had come along up with me. I won't feel quite easy until I see him. Don't you think guns are dreadful things, Peter Rabbit?"

"Yes, indeed! The most dreadful things in all the world," replied Peter promptly. "But I didn't suppose that Cheerful Robin ever had anything to fear from them. I don't see what he goes down South for, if that is the way they treat him."

"He has to get enough to eat," replied Winsome Bluebird, "just as I do. If it wasn't for that we wouldn't either of us go, because you know we love the Green Meadows and the Smiling Pool and the Old Orchard so. Now, I have sat here gossiping with you just as long as I can. I must be spreading the glad news that Mistress Spring is coming."

"I'll help you," said Peter happily, and made ready to start right away for the Green Forest.

FIRST-AID TO AILING HOUSE

By ROGER B. WHITMAN

SHINGLE STAINS

FOR wood shingles it is generally considered advisable to use stain rather than a paint. With the exposed surface sealed by paint, moisture does not dry out readily, and rotting of the under side of the shingles is likely to take place. Stain penetrates the shingle, and does not interfere with the drying out of moisture.

New shingles should be dipped in stain before being laid, to cover all surfaces. The restaining of an old roof must, of course, be with a brush or spray.

Shingle stain can be bought in a variety of colors. However, excellent shingle stains can be made at home. The following formula can be relied on, and is easily prepared—4 gallons raw linseed oil, 2 gallons coal tar cresote oil, 1 gallon Japan drier. If color is wanted, color-in-oil should be mixed with linseed oil to the consistency of paint; 2 gallons of the mixture should be used with the foregoing for a stain to be brushed on.

Coal tar cresote oil has a preservative effect and checks rotting. Its use in a shingle stain is always advisable. Its color is dark, however, and it cannot be used for stains of light tone.

A good treatment for shingles and also for dried-out and weather beaten wood is a mixture of 2 parts of raw linseed oil and 1 part of turpentine, to be applied liberally. The effect of the turpentine is to draw the linseed oil deeply into the wood. This has but a slight darkening effect. When color is desired, color-in-oil can be added.

In dipping new shingles before laying, a small barrel or other container is filled with stain, and the shingles are dipped into it, butt-end first, for three-quarters of their length. They are then thrown in a

As a rule it is the result of lack of confidence in the actual golf stroke. Most players like to get the job of stroking over with as soon as possible once they have started the motion. For them the long, gradually accelerated back and downstrokes are fraught with dangers and invite errors of every description. The real trouble is largely mental and it is through this channel that the fault must be combated. One method of cure suggested by Billie Burke, the former Open champion, is to teach the golfer to force his stroke back further in the backswing than he is inclined to do. This will take a little will power at first but, once the ice is broken, the player will find it increasingly easier to increase the width of the backswing arc. As a result he can bring the clubhead down very slowly, increasing the momentum gradually and make the stroke a swing instead of sharp hit.

SOME BETTER CAUSE

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

SOME men work hard to fill with hate
The hearts of some imagined
"class,"
And others labor until late
To pour for youth the brimming glass.
And so to many a plot and plan
Men give their misdirected skill,
Forget the brotherhood of man
And work but work their brother ill.

Work is a virtue when it's done
To help and not to hurt mankind;
Work is no virtue if the sun
Shall leave a poorer world behind.
The glory of a busy hand
Is not a busy hand alone:
It must be serving God and land,
For usefulness it must be known.

A web I saw a spider spin,
A thing of beauty and of skill,
And yet it hoped to lure within
Another insect it might kill.
Thus all its splendor was destroyed,
This thing of rainbow-tinted gauze.
I wish it might have been employed,
Such labor, in some better cause.

THE LANGUAGE OF YOUR HAND

By Leicester K. Davis
© Public Ledger, Inc.

IN YOUR study of hands you will, of course, find some in which there are discouraging indications that, from a rapid analysis, may lead you to render at least a mental verdict of creative failure. Be careful in reaching such a conclusion, for all the elements of the hand may not corroborate this indication in the third finger.

The third finger now to be analyzed is often found without compensations elsewhere in the hand, in which case it well deserves its name.

The Futile Finger of Brilliance.

You will quickly recognize this type by its shortness, smoothness and straightness. With the fingers pressed together, its tip is always found much below that of the second finger. In many instances, the tip will be even with that of the fourth finger. With the hand extended wide, a third finger of this kind is usually spaced evenly between the second and fourth fingers, although it may be nearer the second finger than the fourth.

The general formation of this finger is rather pegshaped, with often a decided taper at the nail tip, which is slightly rounded. The nail is somewhat oval in shape and well set. Under backward pressure such a finger is found to be moderately flexible but without resilient quality.

You may place the possessor of this type of third finger as one in whom there is very little stirring of creative urge, and whose hope for successful self-expression must be pinned on the objective rather than the subjective things of life.

loose pile for drying. There are advantages in buying shingles ready-stained. In the first place, the shingles are inspected one by one before dipping, and imperfect ones are thrown aside. Dipping is under pressure, so that the stain is forced into the wood much more deeply than is possible with dipping by hand. Also the colors are more permanent and less likely to fade.

Sentinels of Health

Don't Neglect Them!

Nature designed the kidneys to do a marvelous job. Their task is to keep the flowing blood stream free of an excess of toxic impurities. The act of living—life itself—is constantly producing waste matter the kidneys must remove from the blood if good health is to endure. When the kidneys fail to function as Nature intended, there is retention of waste that may cause body-wide distress. One may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel tired, nervous, all worn out.

Frequent, scanty or burning passages may be further evidence of kidney or bladder disturbance. The recognized and proper treatment is a diuretic medicine to help the kidneys get rid of excess poisonous body waste. Use Doan's Pills. They have had more than forty years of public approval. Washington Digest

National Topics Interpreted
By WILLIAM BRUCKART
NATIONAL PRESS BLDG. WASHINGTON, D. C.

Washington.—It appears that another session of congress will go by without the congress and the administration doing anything serious

Spending Will Go On
In the way of cutting down government expenses. There is nothing that can be done now toward carrying out the expressions made by President Roosevelt in his message last January when he told congress that he wanted to cut federal expenses and take important steps toward balancing the federal budget. The reason that federal spending is due to go on for another year at the extraordinary rate of the last four or five years is because a majority in congress, under the lash of the White House, refused to require states and local governments to bear a percentage of the relief costs. In other words, federal spending will go on because congress and the President have lacked the courage to start taking the federal government out of the relief work and gradually restore it to the care of those folks in the various communities who know where relief is needed.

There had been a very determined movement in congress to compel the states to share in the gigantic relief burden. It took on various forms and had various sponsors. But the end and aim of all of them was to divide the cost in equitable fashion.

The proposal that had the best chance of getting through was one offered by Senator Robinson of Arkansas, the Democratic leader in the senate. He offered an amendment to the relief bill which would have required the states to contribute one-fourth of the amount expended in each state, with the federal Treasury supplying the remainder. When that amount was offered, it was something in the nature of a compromise between proposals that the states should bear 40 per cent and that they should bear none of the cost. With the White House operating through the President's lobbyist, Charles West, and Senator Barkley of Kentucky, the administration was able to force defeat of the Robinson amendment.

Now, Senator Barkley is assistant Democratic leader of the senate and so we had the spectacle of one of Mr. Roosevelt's spokesmen being on one side and a second one on the other side. The one who was spurred on by the President was victorious.

I am not sure that the Robinson proposal would have resulted in an appreciable reduction in the federal outlay for relief. Of course, it would have cut the total somewhat but not by the full one-fourth that appeared on its face. It was valuable as a piece of legislation, however, because it would have required the states again to assume some of the burden which only a few years ago they carried in its entirety. It was a principle for which Senator Robinson fought and it was a principle upon which he was defeated because Harry Hopkins, relief administrator, objected and still objects to returning any part of the relief obligation to the local authorities.

I suspect that Senator Robinson's activities on the relief proposition will not help his relations with the White House but I think it ought to be said that Senator Robinson demonstrated again his capacity as a statesman. He demonstrated as well that he recognizes the dangers confronting the United States Treasury which at the end of the current fiscal year—June 30—had an outstanding debt in excess of $36,000,000,000.

From among some of the senators I gained the impression that there is considerable worry about the government's spending and they wanted to see the Robinson amendment prevail because they recognized it as a move that would eventually bring federal government spending within control. Also, senators of that school of thought maintained that if states were called upon to bear some of the burden of relief, it would bring home forcefully the fact that all of this spending must sometime be made up out of taxes. People do not like to pay taxes and they cannot be blamed for their attitude. Unless they realize, however, that borrowed money is being spent and they and their children and children's children are to be taxed to pay off the loans, they will not be in favor of reducing national, state or local expenses.

The debate in the senate on the proposition to send some of the relief burden back to the states showed rather plainly that most of the senators are disgusted with talk that hunger and distress will haunt the land if states are required again to take over some of this charity work. The impression I gained from this debate was that a powerful lobby of mayors from some of the larger cities was turning on all of the steam it could muster. Mayor LaGuardia of New York was the boldest of these as he has been bold constantly in forcing the federal government to pay the relief rolls in New York city and save his own New York city budget.

Another phase of the debate should be noticed. It was the reluctance of congress to reassume its right to direct and control the spending of federal funds. The above-mentioned Mr. Hopkins wants to be free and unfettered in his spending and those policies were the ones he recommended to Mr. Roosevelt. Consequently, with administration pressure on many senators, the Hopkins idea prevailed and so for another year congress must sit back and watch the Hopkins organization spend money virtually any way it desires.

I think there ought to be a lesson in this whole situation upon which the country can look back rather regretfully. The experience gained by making lump sum appropriations certainly shows how a bad habit can be contracted and how difficult it is to cure that habit. Seldom in history until this depression would congress ever vote lump sum appropriations for executive departments to spend as they will. Having contracted the habit, however, it is going to be difficult hereafter to deny any President lump sum appropriations, provided only that he has a substantial majority in the house and senate.

No doubt many persons will wonder why this sort of thing constitutes an important issue. The answer is simple. Governments are wasteful and the federal government, being larger than state or local governments, is just that much more wasteful and unable to handle money carefully. If states and local communities have to bear expenses of this sort out of their own treasuries, they see to it that only those entitled to relief obtain it. Unhappily, the national relief system is caring for thousands upon thousands of men who could get jobs and who could support their families but who will not do so as long as money is given them from Washington.

Since the national debt is at the highest point in the history of our nation, there is a growing conviction at the Capitol that a halt must be called sometime. The present trouble is that there are not yet enough courageous representatives and senators to force a stoppage in such spending.

While the steel strike blazed forth with battle after battle, blood was shed and property was damaged, little attention was paid to a development here in the nation's capital—in the government itself.

While all of the sensational things were happening on the steel front, one Jacob Baker was resigning his job as assistant relief administrator and was accepting the job of chief of a new labor unit to be associated with John L. Lewis and his Committee for Industrial Organization. Mr. Baker's unit is to be made up of government workers themselves, a labor union in the government of the United States.

For some years, there have been minor labor units among government employees. They were affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Generally speaking, they were impotent and did little more than create a dozen jobs for the officials of the organization.

Now, however, the government workers are to have a "militant, fighting labor union which will get things done for them." Such at least is the press agent word that has been spread under Mr. Baker's direction.

Mr. Baker is familiar with the problems of government service. Undoubtedly he recognizes that he cannot use the same methods in organizing government workers that are used in private industry. If, for example, he would attempt a strike, I think probably it would be the end of labor organizations in the government of the "militant, fighting" type.

The advance notices concerning Mr. Baker's plans seem to indicate that he is seeking members below the grades of official rank. In other words, if the Baker plans are carried out, the new union will be made up of the so-called rank and file. This would seem to be an advantageous arrangement because it eliminates some of the dangers that always develop where bureaucrats and division heads assume too much authority.

There is a danger also in confining the organization to the rank and file because among the less experienced labor leaders there is always a tendency "to flare up." That is to say, lacking experience they may say things or do things which are regrettable or which they have cause to regret later on. The violence that has shown its ugly head in the steel strike proves this point. So Mr. Baker has his job cut out for him in this direction.

'Way Back When

By JEANNE

FRED MACMURRAY WASHED CARS FOR A LIVING

NECESSITY is the mother of invention, they say; and if that is so I think someone should emphasize that "Courage is the father of opportunity." So many times, when things look blackest, it seems that only by drawing on reserve strength can we keep going. Suddenly we find ourselves face to face with opportunity. Everything looked hopeless before. We were really almost ready to give up. And, then looking back, we wonder how things could have seemed as bad as they were.

Fred MacMurray was born in Kankakee, Ill., in 1908, and spent his boyhood in Beaver Dam, Wis. He lived a normal small town life for an American youngster. In 1925, when he was seventeen, he was awarded the annual American Legion medal for the student showing the most well-rounded development in scholastic subjects and sports. His mother worked in offices to support them both, and Fred attended Carroll college in Waukesha, Wis., earning his way by playing the saxophone. A broken hip forced his mother to quit work, and Fred left college to try to blow a living out of his saxophone. They moved to Hollywood, Calif., for her health and the boy was glad to get a job washing cars in a garage, to pay her hospital bills. Before he could collect his pay, the garage went bankrupt, and Fred MacMurray faced a discouraging period without a job. He tried to obtain work in the picture studios as a saxophone player, but had no luck. Things looked very black, indeed.

Then, he was signed up with a band called the California Collegians, which worked its way to New York city and was hired for the play "Three's a Crowd." Fred had a small bit which led to a slightly better part in "Roberta." A talent scout for Paramount saw him, brought him back to Hollywood, and he was given a contract which led to his success in pictures.

POET LAUREATE OF ENGLAND WAS A PORTER IN A SALOON

WHAT romantic occupation could you possibly predict for a boy so adventurous that no one could control him, so reckless that the aunt who took care of him after his father and mother died indentured him to a merchant ship at the age of fourteen to curb him? That was John Masefield's start in life and today he holds the highest honors England can give any poet.

Born in Ledburn, Herefordshire, England, in 1874, he sailed the seas for three years. Leaving the ship in port at New York city, he took any odd job he could get. He worked in a bakery and in a livery stable. He was porter in Luke O'Connor's saloon at the Columbian hotel near Jefferson Market jail. Then he moved to Yonkers, at the north end of New York city, where he worked in a carpet factory, rising to the magnificent position of "mistake finder" at $8.50 per week. It was at this time, in his early twenties, that Masefield started to write poetry and in 1897 he left for London. His first volume of verses, "Salt Water Ballads," was published in 1902 opening with "A Consecration," in which he announces himself as the champion of "the dust and scum of the earth." Books of verse and novels followed, one upon the other, and John Masefield became established as one of England's greatest poets.

So, remember John Masefield before you pass judgment on that neighbor's boy who is such a holy terror or that young scamp who works in the saloon across the railroad tracks.

Cheese Savory—Spread seasoned cream cheese on small rounds of previously cooked short pastry. Over the cheese place a round of tomato and a dash of mayonnaise, and top each with a slice of olive. Place in paper containers, sprinkle with finely-grated cheese, and garnish with cress.

Cooking Sour Fruit—Sour fruit will require much less sugar, and be more digestible, if a dessert-spoonful of syrup and a pinch of bicarbonate of soda are added after cooking.

To Prevent Scorching—Leave one small section of a gem pan empty when putting gem batter in pan. Fill this section with water and gems will never scorch.

Why Pans Warp—Aluminum cooking pans are frequently warped out of shape by repeatedly putting cold water in them while they are still hot.

Kidneys and Macaroni—Cut four kidneys in halves, sprinkle with chopped parsley, salt and pepper to taste, and fry. Take one-fourth pound macaroni, break into small pieces, and cook in water, adding a little salt. When quite tender, strain off the water, place macaroni round a dish, and put the kidneys in the center, adding a little gravy. Garnish with two hard-boiled eggs cut into quarters, and four small tomatoes cut into small slices and fried. Serve very hot.

Keeping Brassware Bright—Brass ornaments will remain bright longer if, after polishing, they are given a thin coat of white shellac.

To Freshen Coconut—Shredded coconut, which has become dry, can be freshened by soaking it in sweet milk a few minutes before using.

Banana Toast—Place sliced banana between two slices bread, spread with shortening. Place in baking pan in hot oven until lightly browned.

Measuring Sugar—One pound of granulated sugar equals two cups. One pound of powdered or confectioner's sugar equals two and one-half cups.

Don't Scratch the Table—If tiny squares of blanket or astrakhan cloth are stuck under the corners of your hand sewing machine it can be used on any table without fear of scratching it. Similar patches can also be used on clocks, or anything that stands on a polished surface.
